Middle Assyrian Law Codes dating BC states: "If a man have intercourse with his brother-in-arms, they shall turn him into a eunuch". Focusing on major themes, such as the call to live for the glory of God, the living image of God in creation, and the theological interpretation of Scripture and its practical relevance, Calvin Today demonstrates that although the context has changed radically, the issues of unity, ecumenism and public responsibility which shaped Calvin's thinking have powerful resonance for the modern church.
