These are just a few examples, but using your imagination, you can definitely think of something interesting. Heinlein's "Future History"; it is almost as real--cruelly real--as the world of Orwell's "It also follows--since that appears the author's crusade-- that the illogic and hypocrisy of our own sexual code is exaggerated to the point where the hero, Hal Yarrow, is walled off from any kind of normal relations--by Twentieth Century standards, at least--with his wife, or any other woman. And the discussion needs a gesture toward the heavy Freudian layer.
