Living in China

Endless Love. World-creation, he supposes, is no different, since in addition to the many different primary and secondary ends God could propose, there are likely many different ways of attaining each and every one of them and the optimist is in no position to deny that some of these will be just as good as others, leading to worlds of equal perfection. Hence there is no single best world and thus no requirement - moral or otherwise - for God to create one world in particular.
